BILLY RAY McDONALD

16th Song of Ronzo the Liconian

Suddenly

the sun went black

And the sky floated down toward us

And the trees hid their heads

And the grass lay trembling with no where to go.

Even the wind went mad with fear,

Howling as though all Eternity's hell

had hold of him.

And Man---,

Man without a way to go

stayed still

upon himself

and realized

the moment was at hand.

Suddenly

the sun went black

and everyone was in the same boat

and damned

if it wasn't crowded.
